

Relationship Matters: Promoting Secure Attachment in Young Families

March 19, 2008
9:30 am– 3:00 pm

Relationship drives many aspects of infant development, including cognitive, emotional and social development. This workshop focuses on the importance of relationships -- between parents and children and between adolescent parents and the professionals who work with them -- and how these relationships foster the healthy development of children. This workshop also highlights the components of an effective adolescent parent program and the role every provider can play in enhancing the lives of these young families.

This interactive workshop, led by Michelle Fallon, MSW, LICSW, Center for Early Education and Development, University of Minnesota, includes:

- An introduction to the infant mental health framework – definition, history and current knowledge about what works.
- Implications for work with adolescent parents and their children.
- Strategies for making programs more relationship-based.
- Current research on “what works” with adolescent parents.
